Wilcox (Artz.), May 12.—[Special.]
The paymaster's party left fort Grant for Fort Thomas at 7 a.m., yesterday. It consisted of Maj. J. W. Wham, paymaster U.S.A., Paymaster's Clerk W. K. Gibbons, and an escort of two non-commissioned officers, nine privates and two drivers. The erty rode in an ambulan party rode in an ambulance and an escort wagon, each drawn by six mules. A stop was made at Cedar Springs, 25 miles from Fort Grant, to change mules for a relay that had been sent out from Grant the day be-

At a point about six miles from Cedar Springs and 15 from Fort Thomas, the road winds down the side of a long hill, near the top of which it runs between a high wall of rocks on the east side and a low ledge on the west. The wagons had started down this hill, the ambulance ahead and the wagon about 50 yards behind, when just ahead at a bend in the road and just between the wall and ledge of rocks, a large rock weighing several tons was discovered in the middle of the road. It had apparently fallen from among the rocks on the side as is often the case. The wagons had no passage way around it and so stopped while the men started forward, guns in hand, to remove it. Many of the party had reached the rocks when

Not content with this, the robbers can some men along the brow of the still to get in a cross fire from the left. It is known that at least one man in each of these daulting marties was either killed or

It was then found to be impossible to hold the position behind the ledge under these fires, and a break was made for the ravine below. The ground below the ledge toward to ravine makes a rapid descent, and for 300 years is without shelter.

EIGHT MEN WOUNDED.

As the party went across this, it was exposed to a terrible fire from above, and five men were wounded in traveling it. Three had been wounded before leaving the ledge of rocks. The ravine afforded no shelter force reaching it there being only a little after reaching it, there being only a little eint of the hill. Maj. Wham, while be-ind the ledge, thinking the double crossfire had been silenced, made every effort to-rally the men, and, being the last to leave the dangerous shelter, was a very consplcu-ous mark for the robbers, whose builtet fell thick around him as he crossed alone. ESCAPE OF THE ROBERS.

It was about blirty minutes after the condition for further resistance, and nearly an hour had elapsed before the ceasing of the robbers' fire told that they were off. With the exception of the flanking parties sent out by the robbers very little of them could be seen, and as they were not exposed as they went away. Probably at no time was all the gang seen. One was seen to be taken away on a pack mule and the trail of blood left showed them to have suffered bodily. Three of the mules were shot dead in their tracks, and the harness of the others cut in pieces and they were structed loose. With much difficulty four nules were secured and enough harness tied sogether to hitch them to the ambulance, in which six of the wounded men were pieced and brought to the hospital here.

The robbers had a strong fort built of stone some distance behind their other one, and near their camp, to which they evidently intended to retreat till night if forced out of their first position. Capt. Lebo, Col. Pearson and Maj. Noyes acted promptly, and it is thought the robbers will be captured.

The escert were picked men, principally from the Tenth Cavairy and the Twenty-tourth Infantry. The injured were as fol-

His New York Friends Discredit the Toronto Interview and Insist That a Great Crime Has Been Committed.

By Telegraph to The Times.
CHICAGO, May 12.—[By the Associated Press.] James D. Cornwell, the reporter for the Chicago Times, said by Cronin in the Toronto interview to be the person who introduced the Doctor to Le Caron, the British spy, denies emphatically that there is any truth in the assertion. Cornwell says he was detailed once to interview Cronin on some local Irish matter and that the Doctor subsequently forwarded to Cornwell to have published a long article, in which Cronin was made to figure as a man who was being persecuted in certain ways on account of religion and nationality. Cornwell returned the manuscript. Cronin grew very angry at the result. Other than in these incidents Cornwell knows nothing of Oronin, and never heard of Le Caron until the latter appeared as an informer in London.

"There are only two establishments for weaving, one at Webster, Mass., and the other at Appleton, Wis., the latter doing but little, and neither weaving anything finer than crash. There is nothing in the soil to prevent flax growing. Just as good flax and linen may be produced in every State in the American Union as in any country. Germany now spins and weaves the finest linen, and she has no essentially different climate from America. Many things become successful in America from the fællity with which the people take up and adopt improved process and appliances, and this may be the saivation of the linen industry, of the importance of which there is no question. There is every reason why American farmers should produce a million acres of flax, both seed and fiber, over and above what is now produced, which would acres of flax, both seed and fiber, over and above what is now produced, which would give 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels of seed worth as many million dollars and 2,500,000 tons of flax straw worth 850,000,000, and from which 500,000 tons of flax fiber would be obtained, worth 853,000,000. Once established American invention would employ other industries to consume this raw material." Prof. Willietts has informed the sender that the subject of his letter would be earnestly considered by the department, which would lend its aid to any effort to increase or diversify the agricultural industries of the country.

New Diggings Near Deadwood.
Chicago, May 12.—A special from Deadwood, Dak., says: Great excitement prevalls owing to the discovery of new and rich placer diggings about 40 miles from here. The prospecting of these diggings last year on a small scale showed gold in quantities, and in renewing the work this spring the secret got out and men now are rushing to the new gold fields from all directions, with outlits on their backs and with teams. Parties from the diggings, returning for provisions and supplies, show plenty of gold dust and state that the diggings are extensive and worth 60 and 75 cents per pan.

Ex-Consul Knappe Says the State of War Still Exists-The Great Storm at Apla a Peacemaker.

By Telegraph to The Times.

APIA (Samoa), April 27, via SAN FRANCISCO May 12.—(Copyright, 1889, by the Associated Press.) The little town of Apis has had the appearance; of a camping ground during the last few weeks, since the hurricane occured on March 18th, in which six men-of-war were wrecked and driven ashore. There have been more people leaving here than were ever before known in the history of the place. Nearly all the leaving here than were ever before known in the history of the place. Nearly all the survivors of the three German warships have gone to Sydney, and the 600 American sailors who composed the crews of the Trenton and have been waiting for a steamer to be sent to take them to San Francisco. The great confusion after the storm subsided in a few days, and the shipwrecked sailors settled down to the daily routine of saving everything that could be taken off the wrecked vessels.

The officers and men of the Vandalia are in a more destitute condition than those of any other vessel, they having lost everything and had to be provided with clothing and other necessaries saved from the Trenton and Nipsic.

By the death of Capt. Schoonmaker, the command of the Vandalia's crew devolved upon Lieut. J. W. Carlin. Passed Assistant Engineer Webster has been appointed and the paymaster to fill the vacancy caused by the death of F. H. Arm.

THE TERNTON AND VANDALIA.

THE TRENTON AND VANDALIA. The condition of the Trenton and Van-dalla has not changed much during the dalla has not changed much during the last month. Both vessels are complete wrecks. The hull of the Trenton is several feet above the water, and her masts and riggings are still standing, but she is hard and fast on the bottom with her stern resting against the reef. The Vandalis is entirely under water with the exception of her forecastle and a few feet of rail around the poop deck.

The German cruiser Adler is still upon her beam end on the reef with an immense hole in her bottom. The Eber lies at the bottom of the bay, with a few loose spars floating on the surface.

A considerable quantity of clothing and provisions were saved from the Trenton, and sit the machine gams on the spar deck were also taken ashore. Direct spars the examines the ried ten eight-inft convertee mee, and carriages. They were holsted over the side of the vessel with great difficulty, owing to the creat weight, and taken ashore on lighters. They then had to be the steep embankment a distance of 100 yards. The removal of the guns did not seem to lighten the Trenton in the least, and no attempt was made to pump her out. It is the intention to remove the Vandalia's battery, but as the guns are several feet under water much time will probably be required in the task.

The safes of the Trenton and Vandalia were recovered. Half a dozen divers have worked faithfully for the last six week, and have saved large quantities of stores from the Vandalia. They used no diving apparatus, and exposed themselves to great danger on account of the floating wreekage.

longer be raised at a profit?" The writer, who is familiar with flax-growing and linen manufacturing since 1840, says in his interesting communication:
"There are only two establishments for weaving, one at Webster, Mass., and the comporary repairs made at once, his intended to the vessel. Rear Admirst Kluberty ordered weaving, one at Webster, Mass., and the temporary repairs made at once, his intended to the vessel. temporary repairs made as once, against thon being to send the vessel to Auckla. The Vandalia's smokestack was pla in position on the Nipsie, and a ruddermade. One or two of the officers decla openly that she was unsafe, and objected going to sea in her, but finally the Adm ordered Capt. Mullan to instruct his officers.

A sharp squall came up at the same time and the rain fell fast. The long line of reefs lay off the starboard quarter and it and the rain fell fast. The long line of reefs lay off the starboard quarter and it was necessary to have away hard on the port to keep the vessel's head out to sea. The heavy strain was too much and the port end of the span broke away entirely, and the steering apparatus was rendered useless. The engines were stopped at once and the Nipsic was adrift without a rudder. By the prompt use of a few sails the Nipsic was swung around with her head toward the sea, when she steamed at full speed to a position two miles off the reefs.

Bignals were sent up for assistance, but the weather was so thick they could not be understood and a boat was sent in to get the Mowherd to come out and tow the Nipsic back into the harbor, which was done.

It was found useless to make another attempt to go to Auckland until another rudder could be made. So the Mowherd sailed for Auckland auntil another attempt to go to Auckland until another could be made, as she was sound and did not leak a drop.

BETTING THE SAILORS HOME.

The British man-of-war Rapid arrived here from New Zealand April 18th, bringing word from Lieut. Wilson that he was going to Sydney to purchase a steamer to take the American sailors home. He had heard that the Occanic Steamship Company had, at the request of the havy Department, ordered the Mariposa to stop at Apis April 27th and take 300 men to San Francisco, but he did not believe that the Mariposa could take many of the men, all of her accommodations having been engaged by passengers.

A few days ago Manager Wyatt received a telegram from Booth and Barrett's manager, asking on what terms they could cancel their engage ment. Mr. Wyatt telegraphed back that he would not let them off for less than $3000, and he was anxious to do it at that figure. He then began an investigation and dis-covered that the Booth combination did not care to visit Los Angeles on account of unfavorable reports which have been circulated by some of the have been circulated by some "Jim-Crow" companies that have visited this city and played to "rotten" business. The plot of the play turns on the adventures of "Jack Hammerton," a young auctioneer. This leads him to "put his foot in it" very often, and as a result his best intentions are wrongly construed.

This places him in favor at once, and "Jack" is left in the cold, everyone naturally thinking that he is trying to dispose of a rival to make room for himself. In the second act the villian is exposed, but "Jack" gets into further difficulty by buying "The Larches" himself and making it appear that revenge and pique are his motives. The city reminds one of a belle denuded of her gorgeous plumage, and reposing like the Venus Victrix upon her laurels. For the past week every-thing has been steeped in a prismatic halo of red, white and blue, and the buildings buried beneath an avalanche of bunting and light draperies.

There were a few portraits and innumerable caricatures of the hero of the hatchet and his spouse, Mrs. Martha. In one shop window the savior of his country leered rakishly from beneath a Phrygian cap, his bust being draped in the natural colors in a shamelessly decolleté manner never dreamed of by the virtuous George.

George.

Mrs. Martha's effigy was devoted to the most transparent advertising purposes; and enterprising dry goods venders had her dressed in a Dolly Varden gown of the most promone pattern, her white be-rigged head surmounted by a coquettish Tam O'Shanter cap.

INCIDENTS OF THE PARADE. There were many delightful incidents which varied the monotony of the parade, and revealed human nature under its most philanthropic aspects. Before the Knickerbocker Club, that ultra aristocratic organization, had been erected a commoditus stand. There were many vacant seats, and several of the prominent clubmen went into the crowd and gathered up the poorly-clad women and children and gave them seats. One could see a millionaire by the side of a washerwoman, and a man who would swear at his valet did he perceive a speck of dust upon his coat, would hold up a begrimed urchin to view the procession. parade, and revealed human would note up a begrimed archin to view the procession.

Daintily-appareled ladies in flower-wreathed balconies would stretch forth their arms and relieve tired mothers of their living burdens, and the nation's jubilee seemed for the nonce to level all barriers and reveal the sunny side of man's nature. of man's nature.

SCENES AT THE BALL. One does not care to recapitulate at length the disgraceful scenes at the grand ball, where jewel-bedecked women and well-dressed men enacted scenes worthy of Mabille or Vauxhall. Both men and women reeled through the dance clasping each other in a fervid, intoxicated embrace, which can only be described as bestial and can only be described as bestial and revolting.

There was a mad rush for the supper room, and in the fights which ensued for the possession of the champagne, some ladies received a costly and impromptu bath of Piper Heidsick, their fine dresses being ruined by the steky fluid. The four hundred and the four million were indistinguishable, and jewelry and weeps made uns and never again material-

Our grandmothers mentioned garter behind closed doors and with bated breath, but the fashionable girl discusses this useful article before a man as calmly as she would speak of her bracelet or her watch. The necessary accompaniment of the garter is the embroidered silk stocking, which she accepts in as matter-of-fact style as she would gloves or handkerchiefs.

There is not a superfluity of reserve about the modern belle, and she has adopted the horrible masculine slang as her very own. I heard one well-groomed girl say to a man who had been telling her a story: "What rot!" And another fairy-like creature, when asked how she felt, replied, "Awfully seedy! do get me a Manhattan cocktail or a gin fizz." However, she can procure these liquid refreshments without the intervention of the male element, for she can have her favorite tipple brought to her in a dainty teacup at a swell café. To the uninitiated it is bouillon or coid tea.

Even the insipidity of soda water is relieved by something stronger than syrup, and the milliners and dressmakers serve cognac and sherry to their favored customers. Of course there is no charge, but trimmings are heavily charged in the bill. Poor dear things, fitting is very trying, and who can blame them for wanting some stimulant.

Here comes a woman looking like a revolutionary grenadier in her directoire coat and mannish hat.

There's a statuesque creature draped in a Greek peplum and tightly drawn skirts, and lo and behold there's another in the modified style a Piempire. Let no woman who has not a perfect figure garb herself in the short waist and scanty skirt of the Napoleonic period. To be correct, one must sacrifice the beauty-molding corset, which is the cestus of Venus of the Nineteenth century woman. It is rumored that the women with sumptuous figures are dispensing altogether with undergarments, the clinging robes being worn over silk fleshings.

The absence of the petticoat is not noticeable, as a lace pleating is sewed upon the edge of the skirts. SOMEWHAT LUSCIOUS A lady recently at the Metropolitan Opera-house divided the attention of Opera-house divided the attention of the audience with the ballet girls on the stage. She was garmented in a sheath-like robe of palest flesh color, and in lieu of a bodice she wore a decolleté jersey without any trimming, and fitting like her skin. The dividing line between it and her breast was so indistinguishable that she seemed absolutely clad in her flesh and nothing else.

With an ingenuity worthy of a better cause, another girl made her appearance on a fashionable thoroughfare clad in an innocent-looking gown of cooked-splinach green. This was accordeon pleated, so that when she moved it looked exactly as if it had ripped open accidentally and displayed her flesh beneath. It was, however, perfectly proper, as the fleshy simulation was solely due to an innocent petticoat of pink-tinted silk worn beneath.

THE PET DOG is now seldom seen upon the streets, but when he does make his bow now but when he does make his bow now to the public he is girthed with a broad ribbon across his body like that of a marshal on a field day. On his neck is a collar of linked chains, tied on one side with a ribbon whose shade harmonizes with that of his mistress's gown, and on his slender fore paw is a bangle of hammered silver.

"Poor Mrs. B.!" said a lady to life of day, "isn't it sad she's lost all her family—"

LOOKING TOWARDS FRANCE. Almost every one is preparing to go to the Paris exposition, and the American exhibit will be very creditable. American jewelry, fashioned from decorative studies made from the work of the North American Indians, will be exhibited. Brooches are enameled in imitation of the Navajo blanket, or gold wires are intricately plated to look like the blanket work of some of the tribes. The Montana hog and the Sioux wolf find their prototypes in jeweled scarf pins, and American flowers are imitated in ladies' brooches and earrings.

Nothing but American gold has been employed, and as far as practicable American gems. This country produces many more precious or semi-precious stones than any one imagnes. In New Mexico is found a superior distant of the standard of the sta to the Paris exposition, and the Amer-opals, Arizona gives us garnets and Montana green sapphires. Califor-nia sends garnets and black pearls; Maine, aquae-marine and tourmaline; Virginia, garnets, spessarlite and Amazon stones; Massachusetts, rho-donite, and North Carolina, emeralds, pearls and moonstones. earls and moonstones.

"I never go with men who don't take me out to dinner," remarked a dreamy-eyed blonde. "I regard man solely as a dinner-giving animal, and if he doesn't feed, what's the good of him?"

Many girls levy tribute upon their adorers, and are almost as clamorous in their demands for jeweled garter clasps and gold glove-buttoners as a nomadic Arab is for backsheesh. "We have made careful chemical analyses of several well known branks of saragarilla, and have found them all with the single exception of Joy's to contain todide of potassium. As a result we are enabled to pronounce Joy's to be the only purely vegetable sursaparilla now on the market, which has come under our observation." Modern which has come under our observation." Modern medicine has proven that all ordinary face crup-tions are not caused by diseased blood, but by indigestion and sluggish circulation, which call for vegetable alteratives, instead of mineral blood purifiers like iodide of potassium. Tifficers and the state of the stretching northward from Fort Harrison, Ind., was first opened to settlers. Then it appeared as if half of Kentucky rushed into Western Indiana. A strip of land fifteen miles long, lying between two streams, known as Pig and Little Raccoon, was taken as fast as men could gallop over it and Timely local topics and news given the profer-ence. is a recent description of the settlement of the strip:

Then began the map rush for the land office, for the man who first threw the "numbers of his land" on the desk of the registrar got the possessory title at once; adverse claimants then had to bear the burden of proof, which they could rarely do. Horses were run to death, swollen creeks were swum at the peril of men's lives, and—for it so happened that there was a long-continued rain—men raced all night in the storm to get their share of the beautiful land. And it was beautiful, indeed; a high, gently rolling black earth region, with dense forests of walnut, poplar and sugar maple—the aristocracy of western timber—all the lower slopes covered with tangled spice wood, all the "bottoms" with a five-foot soil that yielded from fifty to eighty bushels of corn per acre for 30 years. Now that it is cleared and well improved, the traveler can find no loveller rural region than that once hotly contested strip of Parke and Montgomery counties. But in those days there were no shooting over disputed claims; the law was plain and the officials houest. And so the rush went on peacefully till the tide reached the wet prairies near Lafayette; there it halted. The tide from the north came down more slowly, and to this day there is a clearly defined east and west line across that part of Indiana, north of which the main stock is "Yankee," south of it "southern." MORE ROOM NEEDED FOR CONGRESSMEN.

How it is Proposed to Provide Ac commodations - Governor Foraker in Washington - He is Set Upon by His Friends

WASHINGTON, May 3 .- | From Our Regular Correspondent.] The realiza-tion that our Union of 13 States has swelled to one of 42, and that the next census of population, if its fruits justify at all the general expectation, will show the United States to contain 70,000,000 souls, forces home upon us the necessity of making some provision for the subsequent increase in the num ber of Representatives in Congress. It is almost out of the question to consider the wisdom of making the ratio of the constituents to members any larger. It is so large now that there is danger of the members being out of touch with opinion and sentiment among the masses of the people at home. What remains is either to extend the size of the hall or reduce the quantity of furniture inside. In the English parliamentary chambers the absence of desks enables a large gathering of legislators to be put into comparatively small space without much discomfort. A like arrangement here would relieve the situation a good deal. It would deprive members, however, of their present means of turning their time to double account weithing the property assession and voting of turning their time to double account by sitting through a session and voting on party measures when the roll is called while writing letters to their constituents. Members of Parliament make notes when they choose, but it is on a slip of paper or pad resting on their knees. If each Congressman were given a clerk to do his letterwriting for him outside of the hall he could open his daily mail in his seat the chose and jot down a word or two on each are raise as a suggestion to the seat of the chose and jot down a word or two on each are raise.

Next came the first great California boom of 1837. In view of what has since happened in this State, it is amusing to read the following, from a "History of the Mexican War," puboon after its close, by E. D.

mand. In view of the alternative some such change seems to be included ble, and not many Congresses hence. A tall, soldierly looking man, wearing a shiny silk hat, which partly concealed his iron-gray hair, stepped up to the register at one of our hotels last evening, and in a few seconds the name of J. B. Foraker was inscribed upon the big book. Simultaneously Ohioans seemed to spring out of the ground, and the popular Governor was quickly surrounded by an enthusiastic crowd anxious to shake hands with him. him.

Releasing himself as soon as possible from his admirers, Gov. Foraker hurried to his rooms, where he joined his family preparatory to going to supper. But he was not suffered to partake of his meal unmolested, and he had hardly seated himself at the table ere d of music, which had been hastily summoned, struck up "Marching Through Georgia" in front of the entrance to the hotel.

A committee called upon Ohio's Gov-fornia gold boom of 1849, which ernor, and without waiting ernor, and without waiting for him to procure a hat, escorted him to the lobby of the hotel, where an enthusiastic crowd awaited him. "I am glad to seesomany Ohio men at the Capitol," said the Governor, "and although I do not know what you want, I believe I am sincere in hoping that you get it." This created a laugh, in the midst of which a invited the teachers about of which a invited the same about of which a same about a same about of which a same about a same about of which a same about a same a s which a jubilant Buckeye shouted, "Come down here for four years, Governor, and we will enlighten you."

The Governor took this remark good-naturedly and continued his speech by thanking chose who had honored him with the serenade, and assured them that anything he could do for residents of his State would be cheerfully done. "I will remain in Washington for a day or two," he concluded, "and I don't want snyone to be backward in continued to the continued of the co want anyone to be backward in cor manding my services. Applicants for an opportunity to see the President upon his return from New York were not as numerous as had been expected. A good many of the anxious ones had doubtless been celebrating the inaugural centennial, and they felt as if a little rest was an imperative necessity before settling down once more to secure recognition—substantial or otherwise—from the administration. On the lower floor there was a great crowd of visitors, principally the overflow from New York. They were on their way to their homes in the West and South, and stopped over to feast their eyes and esthetic tastes on the springtime glories of the most beautiful city of the world. Kimberly as Peacemaker. The most important political event which has occurred here for some time was the issuance of a proclamation by Admiral Kimberly April 17th advising the natives to put an end to the war, which they have been carrying on among themselves for months. One proclamation was in the form of memorandum, and was as follows:

One proclamation was in the form of a memorandum, and was as follows:

"NOTICE, SAMOANS.

"Apis (Samoa), April 17, 1999. Hemorandum.] What the Samoans need most is peace among themselves. I have therefore prepared a paper that can be signed by both parties desirous of obtaining peace and establishing order. . . Men who love their country better than themselves are patriots, Are there no patriots in Samoa? I shall not like to believe it. This paper that I have written only applies to the Samoans themselves, not to foreigners. Therefore it is as a father speaking to his sons. A happy family is one that is united. A quarrelsome family is always weak and unhappy and a prey to strangers. I have great respect for a brave people. The Samoans are brave, but in keeping up this warthey are not wise. If they wish to preserve their country for their children they might have peace and become united. Man's life is short, but a nation lives many generations, and a country given by a grandfather of all should be presented by fathers to their children. No one can deny the facts, and this is a fact because it is true.

This amnesty should be accepted by all concerned, thereby bringing back the blessings of peace, order, good will and prosperity to all Samoans. The hero efforts of Mataafa's men in saving Germanive and property during the storm oug certainty to impress the Germans favorably, and induce them to throw no obstact in the way of establishing peace. I had plan of action. My desire is to assist the Berlin conference, which will be in session soon, by bringing about such a condition of affairs here that a government can be formed in Samoa immediately upon the conclusion of the conference. I have advised Mataata to remain perfectly quiet and not do the slightest thing that may interfers with my plans for establishing peace. Tamasese has promised to communicate with me, and I am looking for a letter from him daily. I have hopes that the difficulty may be settled without further bloodshed."

Admiral Kimberly received a letter from masese April 22d, in which the latter ned himself "King of Samoa." He de signed himself "King of Samoa." He de-clined to make any overtures for peace at present, though he said he desired to have the war brought to a close. He offered to forgive Matafa and all his men if they would throw down their arms. He also stated that he would not consider any proposition for peace until after the conclusion of the Berlin conference, which he expected would settle the difficulty. Tamaser's lettler, together with other correspondence on the same subject, has been forwarded to the State Department at Washington.

Admiral Kimberly informed the Associated Press reporter that Mataafa and Tamasese had agreed upon a temporary truce and had promised that they would do nothing to after the peaceful state of affairs until after the Berlin conference had adjourned.

Drunken Sailors Make Trouble. The order issued by Consul Blacklock rohibiting the sale of liquor to American tilors still remains in force and the town sailors still remains in force and the town is still under the protection of marine quards and native police. The sailors, however, have had little trouble in obtaining liquor and on a number of occasions drunken men have been very disorderly. It became necessary for Admiral Kimberly to issue an order requiring the men to surrender the sheath knives they wear. Mataafa has assisted the Americans in preserving order by issuing a proclamation requiring all Samoans to keep off the streets after dark. VICTIMS OF THE STORM

Not more than one-third of the bodies of the victims of the storm have been recovered. the victims of the storm have been recovered and it is supposed the greater number of them were either washed far out to sea or are fastened to the sunken wreckage. A body, supposed to be that of Capt. Schoonmaker of the Vandalia, which was found on the beach four miles from Apia, was buried on a German plantation near where it was washed ashore. Paymaster Arms's body, which was positively identified, was washed ashore near the house of Capt. Hamilton, an American citizen living in-Apia, who buried the body in his yard. The body of Pay-clerk Roche was found about a mile from the wreck of the Vandalia. A few days after the storm it became almost impossible to identify the bodies, as they were all greatly swelled and discolored by the warm water. So the consuls of the two governments employed natives to, bury all the bodies that or me ashore, and agreed to share the funeral expenses. It is supposed that nearly all the bodies of officers and men of the German gunboat 1 ber are imprisoned in the wreck. An effer twas made two weeks are to blow up the Eber with dynamic so casioned much unfavorable comment, as it was feared the decayed bodies would be scattered all over the beach, and cause disease to break out. However, a proper fuse could not be secured, and the effort to exered and it is supposed the greater numbe scattered all over the beach, and cause dis-case to break out. However, a proper fuse could not be secured, and the effort to ex-plode the wreck was not successful.

There has been great danger of serious libress breaking out in Apia ever since the storm. The rainfall in April is very great, and the drainage of Apia has been neglected during the long wars among the natives. The streams are choked up and stagnant water has accumulated.

The wrecks of the Trenton and Vandalia lie within a few hundred yards of the beach, and the foul gas arising from the great accumulation of bligewater is blown directly on shore. The water in the Trenton is 25 feet deep and black as ink. The gas arising from it is so strong that it has turned the color of all the woodwork above it, including the masts, so that the entire vessel has the appearance of being oxidized.

TWO MORE DEATHS. TWO MORE DEATHS.

There have been two deaths in the hospital during the last month which can be attributed to the recent storm, and will be attributed to the recent storm, and will increase the number of victims to 148. Francis Joseph Heward, a seaman of the Trenton, died April 17th. He was suffering with bronchits at the time of the hurricane, and the disease was aggravated by exposure. The other was a native, who had his foot terribly crushed while assisting in the work of hauling off the Nipsic after the storm, by a spar.

United States store snip Monongahela, which left Mare Island navy yard last February, arrived off the harbor April 3th, but Admiral Kimberly gave orders for her not to attempt to come in as his experience with the harbor during the past few weeks had been anything but favorable. He thought it would be dangerous for a salling vessel to land and the vessel was ordered to Pago-Pago harbor where she landed.

The German Survivors. The steamer Lubeck arrived from Syd ney March 31st, and the survivors of the Adler and Eber began preparations at once to leave for Sydney. Capt. Fritze of the to leave for Sydney. Capt. Fritze of the Adler decided to leave a small guard here to protect German interests. Capt. von Erhardt of the Olga also announced his intention of sailing for Sydney under convoy of the Lubeck. He stated openly that he had had enough of the Samoan trouble, and had lost all interest in the subject since the storm. He thought the best thing the Germans could do was to sell out to the Americans and leave the country.

The Olga and Lubeck sailed for Sydney April 24. The Olga dipped her fig as she steamed out and the Nipsic returned the salute. Ten survivors of the Eber and about 50 of the Adler took passage on the Lubeck. Five officers and about 80 men under command of Capt. von Arend were left here to protect the property of the German firms.

tress reporter, Capt. von Arend said he thought the storm had settled the Samoan question more effectually than the Berlin conference would be able to do. He said that he did not consider the whole group of islands worth the trouble that Americans and Germans had taken to protect their respective interests here.

The natives have not shown the slightest inclination to attack the small guard which the Germans left here. The Germans evidentily have full confidence in Matasaf's peaceful disposition. A few days after the Olga had sailed the Associated Press reporter asked Dr. Knappe, the German Consul, if he still recognized the state of war between the Germans and Matasfa.

"Certainly I do," he replied. "My proclamation declaring a state of war for the Samoan, Islands has never been withdrawn."

"Do you not think," was asked, "that your force of 80 men is rather small compared with the 5000 or 6000 natives now in Matasfa's camp?"

"The guard is large enough to protect our property," the Consul said, "and we do not contemplate anything further than that at present."

Consul Knappe said he had tried to in-nce Mataafa's men to stop stealing from the ermans and go to their homes.

He also declares that the German postno also declares that the German post-office in Apia had been insulted by the in-sinuations in American newspapers that mails had been tampered with. Consul Knappe also stated that he was still Consul at Apia and that Herr Strubel was sent here only as a special commissioner.

Some one in Apia had written a letter to Messarts stating that news had been received from the Australian papers that more German war-vessels were on the way to prosecute the war against the natives. Parti asked Knappe if these statements were true.

Knappe if these statements were true.

"If they are true," the Chief said, "I want to know it. If the German Government is sending more war vessels here to fight the Samoans I don't propose to wait until they arrive. I will send 2000 men at once, and all the German property in Samoa will be destroyed."

Admiral Kimberly, with Vice-Consul Blacklock, afterward had a conference with Knappe about the termination of the war. Nothing was accomplished. The war scare broke out among Mataafa's men on the night of April 3d. They were preparing for a review of their forces in Apia and it was expected that very few men would be left in the camp. A report reached Apia that Tamasese Intended to take advantage of the absence of so many of Mataafa's men and attack the camp. PLYMOUTH, May 12.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] The steamer Rugia, from New York May 2d for Hamburg, which arrived today, reported that cotton in her after-hold spontaneously ignited on the night of the 8th. It is feared the steamer's cargo is greatly damaged.

After the fire had gained considerable headway, some of those on board made preparations to desert the ship, but were prevented from doing so by the Captain, who threatened them with his revolver.

When the iron bulkhead doors were opened the heat became so intense that many persons were scorched, and the cotton baies around the passengers' baggage took fire. Casks of lard, which formed part of the vessel's cargo, also furnished fuel for the flames. Hope had been well nigh abandoned and the boats had been lowered to leave the threatened steamer when it occurred to the captain to try steam instead of water against the fire. This plan was put in execution and proved successful.

The passengers have presented the captain with an address and the crew this various gifts as evidences of gratifude and esteem for their good work in the milist of the awful dangers which encompassed them all.

result of an ill-timed attempt to corner the lead supply of the world. As now revealed the real reason was very different. The facts as related in brief are that Corwith's every move in speculation was "coppered" with his own capital by his own son, Gurdon Corwith, and that before the crash came $1,100,000 had been withdrawn from the old man's coffers and sunk in operations in which the younger Corwith had become hopelessly involved.

Young Corwith was at the time a metal broker in New York, and induced his father to believe that he had exclusive information regarding the plans of the French copper syndicate as to lead. The father was in poor health, and allowed the son unsual leawny. Until the actual collapse was reached Corwith believed he had an enormous amount of lead on hand and paid for, when the fact was that the lead purchased had been sold and the proceeds utterly wiped out by young Corwith's operations.

FRESH LITERATURE.

There is no question of more solen mport, or of equal importance to the human race, than the question of the hereafter. Beyond the silence of the grave, beyond its shadow and darkness what is in store for us when the brief span of earthly life is ended? If the soul of man is immortal, and destined to exist either in a state of happiness or misery, what are the conditions attending this life that will make it possible for man to secure happiness in the life to come, and what evidence have we of that life, or what knowledge in regard to its rewards and punis ments? From the uncounted millions of graves, in which sleep the dead of all earth's ages, there comes no voice all earth's ages, there comes no voice to answer our anxious questionings. The pall of unbroken stillness is over them all, and only echo mocks us as we ask of them the secret which death holds. But still there is light for the race. From the pages of divine inspiration shines the glory of hope and the brightness of undying faith, and from those pages the author of this volume has gleaned a vast amount of knowledge in regard to the future state, and set it before us in a convincing array of

This story opens on a stormy night of a dreary Russian winter. It is a lonely and solitary picture into which the leading characters of the story are introduced, where the falling snow-flakes "flashed like tiny diamonds around the lanterns of a large 'vozoke,' which with its four swift horses, passed over a road scarcely visible across the to recover the money which he has already paid in a land trade with Charles Stimson. The latter, in his answer, denied that the defendant had any right to secure such a ruling, and asked that Sorabjee pay the balance on the trade still due, about $1700. The trial lasted three days, and the jury decided that Mr. Sorabjee should carry out his contract.

The interest of the reader is equipage into the courtyard of a large stone house, where the Count alights, and clerify woman, with whom he has a few moments' conversation; and then another woman appears—a servant of another woman appears—a servant of the house—bringing in her hand a basket well covered with a shawl, in which is wrapped a little human waif, adrift on the shores of life. Through the darkness of the night he is borne away to the house of a worthy priest, in whose care the lit-tle one is placed, and the priest gives him the name of Nikanor, and it is the story of his life which the book con-tains, touched here and there with romance and with tragedy.

This volume contains a pretty story, peculiarly French in character, but delightful in the spirit of lofty heroism and love of country which animates the principal characters about whom the interest of the story centers. The descriptive portions show the hand of a master, and the "old, old story," which the world always loves to hear, and which will be sweet and tender while "eyes look love to eyes which speak again," is very charmingly told with many a delicate touch which adds charm to the romance of two brave hearts, which, romance of two brave hearts, which, after much doubt and suffering and patient sacrifice, are united and happy.

THE CRIME OF THE GOLDEN GULLY; an Australian Romance, by GILBERT ROCK. New York: Pollard & Moss. Pub-lishers. For sale at the People's Store. The scenes of this story are princi-pally laid in the mining camps of Aus-tralia. It is the old story of avarice, which leads to crime. It is not a pleaswhich leads to crime. It is not a pleas-ant picture to contemplate, yet it is one true to many a human experience. The guilty murderer is pursued by his avenging Nemesis, and it is well illus-trated how difficult it is for the crimi-nal to escape the punishment of his

SUBJECT OF DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON, MAY 12.

Parallel Drawn Between the Pas and Present-The Coloquintida of Mighty Temptation-Caldrons of Iniquity to Be Found Every-Where in Modern Life.

BROOKLYN, May 12 .- [Authorized Report for the Los Angeles Times. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D. preached at the Tabernacle today to a vast congregation, who sang with grand effect the hymn beginning:

My soul, be on thy guard;
Ten thousand foes arise,
And hosts of sin are pressing hard
To draw thee from the skies.
His subject was "A Poisoned Dinner," and his text II Kings iv, 40: "So poured out for the men to eat. And it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, 'O, thou man of God, there is death in the pot!' And they could not eat thereof."

Elisha had gone down to lecture to the students in the theological semi-nary at Gilgal. He found the students very hungry, as students are apt to be.
It is very seldom the world makes large provision for those who give themselves to intellectual toil. In order that these students may be prepared to hear what Elisha says, he first feeds their hunger. He knew very well it is useless to talk, to preach, to lecture, to argue with hungry men. So Elisha, recognizing this commonsense principle, which every Christian ought to recognize, sends servants out to get feed for these hungry students. They pick up some good, healthful herbs, but they happen to pick up also some coloquintida, a bitter, poisonous, deathful herb. They bring all these herbs, they put them into the boiling pot, they stir them up, and then a portion of this food is brought to the students and their professors. Seated at the table, one of the hungry students begins immediately to eat, and he happens to get hold of some of the coloquintida. He knew it by the taste. He cries out: "Poison, poison! O thou man of God, there is death in the pot!" Consternation is thrown over the first feeds their hunger. He knew man or God, there is death in the pot:

Consternation is thrown over the whole group. What a fortunate thing it was that this student so early found the coloquintida in the mixture at the table! You will by reference find the story is precisely as I have mentioned it.

CALDRONS OF SIN AND DEATH. Well, in our day there are great caldrons of sin and death. Coloquintida of mighty temptation is pressed caldrons of sin and death. Coloquintida of mighty temptation is pressed into it. Some dip it out, and taste, and reject it and live. Others dip it out, taste it, keep on and die. And it is the business of every minister of religion and every man who wishes well to the human race, and who wants to keep the world back from its folies and its sufferings, to cry out: "Beware! poison, poison! Look out for this caldron! Stand back! Beware!"

Sin has done an awful work in our world. It has gone out through all the ages, it has mixed up a great caldron of trouble and suffering and pain, and the whole race is poisoned—poisoned in body, poisoned in mind, poisoned in soul. But blessed be God that the ages, it has mixed up a great caldron of trouble and suffering and pain, and the whole race is poisoned—poisoned in soul. But blessed be God that the ages, it has mixed up a great caldron of trouble and suffering and pain, and the whole race is poisoned—poisoned in soul. But blessed be God that the stand where there was death there shall be life.

Sometime ago, you will remember, I persuaded you of the importance of being charitable in judgment of others. At the same time I said to you briefly what this morning I wish to say with great emphasis, that while we sympathize with the sinner we must denounce the sin; that while we pity the unfortunate we must be vehement against transgression. Sin is a jagged thing that needs to be roughly handled. You have no right to garland it with fine phrases or lustrous rhetoric. You cannot catch a buffalo with a silken lasso.

how into the caverns wherein they hide we need to go with the torch of God's word in one hand and the sword of God's eternal spirit in the obta to their hiding-places. Or, to come back to the figure suggested by my text, we want to find out what are the calidrons of sin and death from which the injuities of society are dipped out.

EXDISCIPLINED HOMES.

First—In the first place, I remark that unhappy and undisciplined homes are the caldrons of great injuity. A good home is deathless in its influence. The parent may be dead. The old homestead may have been sold, and it may have gone entirely out of the possession of the family. The house itself may be torn down. The meadow brook that wound in front of it may have changed its course or entirely dried up. The long line of old fashioned hollyhocks and the ridges and hedges of wild rose may have changed its course or entirely and look at the ted place, but how changed its course or entirely and look at the ted place, but how changed its course or entirely and look at the course of modern gardening. Rascally and scoundrelly people for the most part come from iniquitous homes, from undisciplined homes. Parents harsh and cruel on the one hand, or on the other hand loose in their government—wickedly loose in their government—are raising up a generation of vipers. A home where scolding and fretfulness are dominant is blood relation to the gallows and the penitentiary! Petulance is a serpent that crawls up into the family nursery sometimes and crushes everything. Why, there are parents, who even make religion disgusting to their children. They scold them for not loving Christ. They have an exasperating way of doing their duty. The house is full of the warhoop of contention, and from such a place husband and sons go out to die.

Oh, is there a Hagar leading away Ishmael into the desert to be smitten of the thirst and parched of the sand? In the solemn birth hour a voice fell to thee from the throne of God, saying: "Take this child and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages." At eventime when the angels of God hoves over that home, do they hear the children lisping the name of Jeeus? O traveler for eternity, your little ones gathered under your robes, are you leading them on the right road, or are you taking them out on the dangerous winding bridle path off which their inexperienced feet may slip, and up which comes the howling of the wolf and the sound of loosend ledge and tumbling avalanche? Blessed is the family altar at which the children kneel. Blessed is the cradle in which the Christian mother rocks the Christian child. Blessed is the roadie in which the Christian mother rocks the Christian child. Blessed is the roadie in which the Christian mother rocks the Christian othid. Blessed is the song the little ones sing at nightfall when sleep is closing the eyes and loosening the hand from the toy on the pillow. Blessed is that mother whose every heart throb is a prayer for her children's welfare.

The world grows old, and the stars will cease to illuminate it, and the waters to refresh it, and the mo

A house took fire and the owner was very careful to get all his furniture out. He got all his books out, and he got all his valuable papers out, but he forgot to ask, until it was too late, "Are my children safe?" Oh, when the earth shall melt with fervent heat, and the mountains shall blaze, and the seas shall blaze, and the earth shall blaze, will your children be safe? Will your children be safe? Unhappy and undisciplined homes are the source of much of the wretchedness and sin of the world.

I know there are exceptions to it sometimes. From a bright and beautiful Christian home a husband or son will go out to die. Oh, how long you had that boy in your prayers. He does not know how many aleepless nights you have spent over him. He does not understand byw many tears you have shed for his waywardness. Oh, it is hadd after you have toiled for a child and given him every advantage and our cities who are trying to get their living by their wits and by sleight of hand is all the time increasing.

A New York merchant saw a young man, one of his clerks, in half disguise, going into a very low place of amusement. The merchant said to himself:
"I must look out for that clerk, he is going in bad company and going in bad places; I must look out for him." A few months passed on, and one-morning the merchant entered his store, and this clerk of whom I have been speaking came up in assumed consternation and said: "Oh, sir, the store has been on fire; I have put out the fire, but

and the next misery. Every saloon above ground or under ground is a fountain of iniquity. It may have a license, and it may ge along quite respectably for a while, but after a while the cover will fall off and the color of the iniquity will be displayed.

the cover will fall off and the color of the iniquity will be displayed.

"Oh," says some one, "you ought to be easier on such traffic when it pays such a large revenue to the Government, and helps support your schools and your great institutions of mercy." And then I think of what William E. Gladstone said—I think it was the first time he was Chancellor of the Exchequer—when men engaged in the ruinous traffic came to him and said their business ought to have more consideration from the fact that it paid such a large revenue to the English ruinous traffic came to him and said their business ought to have more consideration from the fact that it paid such a large revenue to the English Government. Mr. Gladstone said: "Gentlemen, don't worry yourselves about the revenue; give me thirty millions of sober people, and we'll have revenue enough and a surplus."

We might in this country—this traffic perished—have less revenue, but we would have more happy homes, and we would have more peace, and we would have more peace, and we would have fewer people in the penitentiary, and there would be tens of thousands of men who are now on the road to hell who would fart on the road to heaven.

But the financial ruin is a very small part of it. This iniquity of which I speak makes everything that is sacred out of the timily: everything that is infant in the small and tramples it under foot. The marringe day has come. The twain are at the altar. Lights flash. Music sounds. Gay feet go up and down the drawing-room. Did ever a vessel launch on such a bright and beautiful sea? The scene changes. Dirty garret. No fire. On a broken chair a sorrowful wife. Last hope gate. Poor, forsaken, trodden under foot, she knows all the sorrows of being a drunkard's wife. "Oh," she says, "he was the kindest man that ever lived, he was so noble, he was so good! God never made a grander man than he was, but the drisk did it, the drink did it!" Some day she will press her hands against her temples and cry. "Oh, my brain, my brain!" Or she will go out on the abutment of the bridge some moonlight night and look down on the glassy surface, and wonder if out on the abutment of the bridge some moonlight night and look down on the glassy surface, and wonder if under that glassy surface there is not some rest for a broken heart.

A young man, through the intercession of metropolitan friends, gets a place in a bank or store. He is going to leave his country home. That morning they are up early in the old homestead. The trunk is on the wagon. Mother says: "My son, I put a Bible in the trunk, I hope you will read it often." She wipes the tears away with her apron. "Oh." he says, "come don't you be worried, I know how to take care of myself. Don't be worried about me." The father says: "My son, be a good boy and write home often, your mother will be anxious to hear from you." Crack! goes the whip, and over the hills goes the wagon. Five years have passed on, and a dissipated life has done its work for that young man. There is a hearse coming up in front of the old homestead. The young men of the neighborhood, who have stayed on the farm, come in and say: "Is it possible? Why, he doesn't look natural, does he? Is that the feair brow we used to know? It tan't be possible that is him." The parents stand looking at the gash in the forehead from which the life oozed out, and they lift their hands and say: "O my son, Absalom, my son, my son!" Dounkenness An expensive defart.

DRUNKENNESS AN EXPENSIVE DRAFT.

Lorenzi de Medici was very sick, and some of his superstitious friends thought if they could dissolve a number of pearls in a cup and then he would drink them, it would cure him of the disease. So they wet around and gathered up all the beautiful pearls they could find, and they dissolved them in a cup, and the sick man drank them. Oh, it was an expensive draft. But I tell you of a more expensive draft than that. Drunkenness puts into its cup the pearl of physicial health, the pearl of comestic happiness, the pearl of respectability, the pearl of Christian hope, the pearl of an everlasting heaven, and presses it to the hot lips.

I tell you the dramshop is the gate of hell. The trouble is they do not put up the right kind of a sign. They have a great many different kinds of signs now on places where strong drink is sold. One is called the "restaurant." and another is called the "salonn." and another is called the "wine cellar," and another is called the "wine cellar," and another is called the "wine cellar," and another is called the "suppose that is a sample." I tell you it is the gate of hell.

"Oh," says some man. "I am kind, I am indulgent to my family, I am right in many respects, I am very generous," and I have too grand and generous a moral nature to be overthrown in that way." Let me say that the persons Lorenzi de Medici was very sick, and this clerk of whom I have been speaking came up in assumed consternation and said: "Oh, sur, the store has been on fire; I have put out the fire, but there are a great many goods lost; we have had a great erowd of people coming and going." Then the merchant took the clerk by the collar and said: "I have had enough of this; you cannot deceive me; where are those goods that you stole?" The young man instantly confessed his villary.

O, the numbers of people in these great cities who are trying to get their living not honestly! And they are an injekt temptation to the industrious young man, who cannot understand it. While these others have it so easy, they have it so hard. Horatius of older time was told that he could have just as much ground as he could plow around with a yoke of oxen in one day. He hooked up the oxen to the plow and he cut a very large circle, and plowed until he came to the same point where he started, and all that property was his. But I have to tell you today that for the was a wind caldrons of death today is an indolent life. John of Barneveldt-A Celebrated French Philosopher - Maria Theresa and Her Court-Pope Pius the Ninth - The Berlin Treaty.

John of Barneveldt, the celebrated Dutch statesman whose history has been written by John Lothrop Motley, was beheaded at The Hague May 13, 1619. After William of Orange, the Dutch owed their emancipation from the Spanish yoke to the man whom they beheaded. As Advocate-General of Holland he gained for his country peace, prosperity, freedom from debt and the restoration of the towns which had been surrendered to England as security for a loan, and extorted from Spain a recognition of Holland's independence. His great enemy was Prince Maurice of Orange and a struggle ensued between the civil and milgle ensued between the civil and military powers. There was also a contest between the Calvinists and Arminians, to which last Barneveldt belonged. He contended for toleration of all sects, even the Catholics. To gain their point the Calvinists joined Prince Maurice, who was not of their belief, and by this combination the liberal and patriotic Barneveldt was overpowered. After a trial which was a mockery of justice, he was condemned to death, and actually suffered the punishment of decapitation May 13, 1619, when 72 years old.

A GREAT NATURALIST.

A GREAT NATURALIST. Baron Cuvier, the celebrated French philosopher, statesman, author and philosopher, statesman, author and naturalist, was born August 23, 1769. He studied at Stuttgart, and his early essays on natural history attracted great attention, so that when he settled in Paris in 1795 he was treated with marked distinction by the savants of that city. He became professor of natural history, a member of the French Institute, and in 1802 was elected perpetual secretary of the Academy of Sciences. Cuvier laid the foundation of the present science of comparative anatomy, in laid the foundation of the present science of comparative anatomy, in his great work on "The Animal Kingdom," which was published in 1817. His brain weighed 64 ounces and was one of the largest ever known. Cuvier died May 13, 1832.

One of the most celebrated of female One of the most celebrated of female sovereigns was Maria Theresa, daughter of Emperor Charles VI., and Queen of Hungary and Empress of Germany. She was born May 13, 1713, and succeeded her father upon his death in October, 1740. Her title to her hereditary possessions had been secured by the Pragmatic sanction; still her accession was the signal for an European war. The Elector of Bavaria claimed the domains of the house of Austria, and Spain asserted an European war. The Elector of Bavaria claimed the domains of the house of Austria, and Spain asserted her right to Hungary and Bohemia, while the new King of Prussia, Frederick II., made haste to occupy Silesia. Neither this war nor that which terminated in 1763 could wrest Silesia from the Prussian arms. Frederick offered to defend the young Empress in return for the cession of Silesia, but she replied haughtily that she defended her subjects and did not sell them. During her long reign, which terminated in the self deals in 1769, farma Theresa abolished the use of torture in feudal service, suppressed the order of the Jesuits in her dominions, and the inquisition at Milan, and introduced many important reforms in the administration of her government. When the war of 1741 was about to break out, the King of France affected indifference. "Whom are you for making Emperor, Souvre?" he asked one of his courtiers. G. G. Green—DEAR Sir: I am frequently troubled with severe colds, and the only remedy that will relieve me of them is your Boschee's German Syrup. I have used it for more that twelve years. It is a constant household companion with me. Our merchant here procured it first at my solicitation, and says he has sold a great many bottles. It is a very popular remedy in this section. Every person who has used it speaks in the highest terms of its merita. I do not know of a single case it has not cured. I first used it in Vermont, where I lived before coming here. I advise every one to use it, as it is certainly the best cough medicine I have ever known. I have tried nearly all of them at different times. Yours respectfully. Moszs Gray.

It is a source of gratification to me to be able to testify to the very satisfactory oure Dr. M. Hilton Williams has offected in my case with his Compound Oxygen and other inhalations. After suffering several years with catarrh of the head and throat also broachitis, which caused a very aggravating cough, I applied to Dr. Williams, who effected an entire cure in just two months from the time I began the treatment. I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Williams as a Christian gentleman and a conscientious and skillful physician, whose cures seem almost marvelous in cases of consumption, asthma, broachitis and catarrh.
